

Schuller. For 30 years, The Rev. Schuller has brought his message of hope and positive thinking to the world.

The Hour of Power is now broadcast all over the world, on each and every continent, to over 30 million people in more than 200 countries. Dr. Schuller has preached in Russia and in a Damascus mosque. His show was the first ministry available to Christians in the Soviet Union in 1989.

But my friend the Rev. Schuller will tell you that his future was not so certain once upon a time. In 1955 he was preaching at a drive-in theater. He once doubted whether there was enough support for his program.

But like he constantly reminds me, "God loves you," He loves the Reverend too. And Dr. Schuller found himself blessed with the generosity he needed to begin his ministry.

On September 14, 1980, Dr. Schuller dedicated the Crystal Cathedral in Garden Grove—located in my Congressional District in Orange County, California—to the glory of man for the greater glory of God. It is now home to the worldwide Crystal Cathedral Ministries, and hosts a congregation more than 10,000 members strong as well as the Hour of Power.

The Rev. Schuller's faith saw him through those early years, and our community is not only stronger and better for it, but also closer to God. I salute Dr. Schuller today in honor of the 30th anniversary of the Hour of Power.

OPENING OF THE ARMENIAN EDUCATION, ART & COMMUNICATION CENTER IN SCOTTSDALE, ARIZONA

HON. FRANK PALLONE, JR.

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 10, 2000

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, on Saturday, February 12, 2000, a ribbon cutting ceremony will be held for the opening of the Armenian Educational, Art & Communication Center and the Nikit and Eleanora Ordjanian Library-Museum, including the Personal Library of Reverend Father and Arafelian and the ACYO Computer Karam Center. This event will be held at the Armenian Apostolic Church of Arizona in Scottsdale, AZ.

This ceremony will be followed by a concert by George Mgrdichian, the world-renowned virtuoso of the oud, a traditional Armenian instrument. Mr. Mgrdichian is the writer and performer of the Broadway musical "Nine Armenians."

Mr. Speaker, it is always a matter of great pride for me to join with the Armenian-American community in welcoming a new center for the celebration and advancement of Armenian culture. The Armenian-American community, over one million strong, has contributed in countless ways to the economy and the culture of the United States. While embodying the American Dream, the sons and daughters of Armenia who have settled in the United States have for generations striven to maintain their links to one of the most ancient and enduring cultures in the human race.

Next year, the Republic of Armenia will be the site of celebrations for the 1,700th anniversary of Christianity. Armenia is, in fact, the first nation to have embraced Christianity as its national religion. And the history of the Armenian nation, language and people goes back many centuries earlier. In the years since, despite terrible periods of war, conquest and oppression, the Armenian people have endured and preserved. Today, Armenians the world over can take pride in the tremendous strides made by the Republic of Armenia and the Republic of Nagorno Karabagh, emerging democracies that seek to establish their rightful place as members of the family of nations. The sense of pride in being Armenian can be felt in many parts of the world, from Yerevan to Stepanakert to Scottsdale, Arizona, to my hometown of Long Branch, New Jersey.

Mr. Speaker, it is an honor and a privilege for me to congratulate the Armenian-American community of Scottsdale on the opening of this new facility, and to pay tribute to this important event in the pages of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

HONORING GEORGE KNIERIM

HON. MARK UDALL

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 10, 2000

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the passing of a special brand of American hero. George Knierim was an ordinary citizen who devoted his abundant skills to realize his vision of the United States aid effort in the third world. For 30 years, Knierim worked for the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), sharing his agricultural knowledge, training, and expertise with governments and farmers in Nepal, Iraq, India, Afghanistan, Turkey, and Sri Lanka.

USAID had its origins in President Truman's Inaugural Address of 1949 when he said, "Only by helping the least fortunate of its members to help themselves can the human family achieve the decent, satisfying life that is the right of all people." This vision energized and motivated a generation of technical advisors to work in agriculture, education, and infrastructure improvements in remote, developing regions of the world. Knierim and his colleagues had an impact on the lives of countless people as they shared the benefits of our extensive American experience. He used his single-minded passion to help protect fragile environments, provide pure water supplies, improve irrigation practices and improve varieties of cereal grains for the developing world. Although he received much recognition for his work, he considered his most prestigious title to be "American Farmer." Among the many and varied achievements of his career, the one that pleased him most was the opportunity to reinvent and adapt Nineteenth century-style farm implements for use with Asian draft animals. "I just gave them the tools and ideas that the Mormons brought with them into the Salt Lake Valley," he said.

George Knierim is symbolic of the thousands of men and women who sacrificed the comfort of their homeland and family in the United States to share techniques and technology with people for whom simple existence and subsistence was a daily challenge.

Our nation has been blessed because of the contributions of compassionate people like George Knierim, who carried their kindness throughout the globe. Today, Mr. Speaker, I pay tribute to George Knierim, who shared a portion of the American dream with the world.
